Temporary Quarters on North Cove Street With Improved Machinery.

The mattress factory of Morris Sussman, which was totally destroyed in the latter part of June, when the old ropewalk building was struck by lightning, is again in full operation, now being located in a building on North Cove street, and Mr. Sussman has just installed new modern machinery so that it is now up to the capacity of the plant that was burned.

Immediately after the fire Mr. Suss-man located on North Cove street, making mattresses first by hand, but he is now doing the work by machinery, having finished installing it last week. The location, however, is expected to be only temporary, as he is on the lookout for other quarters.

It is reported that negotiations are under way for the purchase by Givernaud Brothers of the lot upon which he old ropewalk stood. It adjoins their West Side silk mill property and would afford them an outlet to Spring street. The ropewalk property belongs to Charles Slosberg.
